

WHAT IS THE WINTER SCHOOL ABOUT?

The Winter School is a two-week international postgraduate programme on federalism, regionalism and multilevel governance. It explores, from an interdisciplinary and comparative perspective, how federalism can contribute to multilevel, integrated and pluralistic decision-making.

A wide range of lectures provides an opportunity for participants to broaden their knowledge of multilevel governance and government, especially from the perspectives of legal and political sciences. Top-notch scholars coming from different backgrounds and from around the globe lead courses and workshops on federalism and its challenges in the Winter School's international learning environment.

The 2017 edition of the School will focus on power-sharing in federal systems. For one week at the University of Innsbruck and one week at the European Academy of Bolzano/Bozen (EURAC), participants will analyze the legal structures of distribution systems, their interpretation by courts, and the differences between dual and integrated, asymmetric and devolved federal systems. Furthermore, hot topics such as asymmetric federalism and the impact of federal power-sharing on key policy fields will be discussed. Among the practical case studies from different continents (Asia, Africa and Europe), special attention will be paid to the allocation of powers and subsidiarity in the European Union.

Beside numerous opportunities for discussion with leading experts on multilevel governance throughout the lectures, interactive sessions will also offer participants the chance to share knowledge among themselves. Both lectures and workshops will address the issue of power-sharing in the context of fiscal relations, environment, education, social welfare and immigration/integration.

The Winter School will examine a series of issues:

- How can federalism be used as a tool to divide and share powers?
- Which role do courts play in competence interpretation?
- Do power-sharing systems vary with regard to particular models of federalism?
- How can asymmetric federalism be accommodated in the power-sharing system?
- What is the impact of the subsidiarity principle on the relationship between the EU and its member states?

- How does power-sharing impact on particular policy fields, such as fiscal relations, environment, education, social welfare and immigration/integration?
- What lessons can be learned from comparative practice?

The Winter School 2017 examines these and other questions by combining theoretical expertise and relevant case studies. As such, the programme is a unique opportunity for young academics, post-graduate students and practitioners to receive enhanced training on the theoretical and practical aspects of federalism.

WHO CAN PARTICIPATE?

The Winter School is designed for those who wish to upgrade their knowledge of federalism through an interdisciplinary and comparative approach, including:

- post-docs, postgraduate students and young researchers
- civil servants from local, regional or national government
- employees of international organisations or NGOs

Please note that the programme builds on assumed prior knowledge of federalism.
