How it works?

1. A student uploads a paper to Turnitin.com
2. The paper is compared to millions of books/publications; over 45 billion web pages; and 337 million student papers.
3. Results are returned in seconds, showing matches of the student paper to content from the Turnitin database.

Content Databases

- The Current and Archived Web: Similar to Google and Bing, Turnitin has built a web crawler that crawls the Internet and indexes content into a searchable form. Turnitin currently contains over 45 billion web pages from the current web as well as archived web pages.*
- Student Papers: Over 50 percent of plagiarism comes from other students' work. Turnitin compares submitted papers to a database of over 337 million papers in the Turnitin paper database. Each day, the Turnitin student database grows by 190,000 papers.*
- Content Partnerships: Turnitin has partnered with leading content publishers, including library databases, text-book publishers, digital reference collections, subscription-based publications, homework helper sites and books.*

Plagiarism

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

For other uses, see Plagiarism (disambiguation).
For Wikipedia policies concerning plagiarism, see Wikipedia:Plagiarism and Wikipedia:Copyright violations.

Plagiarism is the "wrongful appropriation" and "stealing and publication" of another author's "language, thoughts, ideas, or expressions" and the representation of them as one's own original work.[1][2] The idea remains problematic with unclear definitions and unclear rules.[3][4][5] The modern concept of plagiarism as immoral and originality as an ideal emerged in Europe only in the 18th century, particularly with the Romantic movement.

Plagiarism is considered academic dishonesty and a breach of journalistic ethics. It is subject to sanctions like penalties, suspension, and even expulsion. Recently, cases of 'extreme plagiarism' have been identified in academia.[6]

Plagiarism is not a crime per se but in academia and industry, it is a serious ethical offense,[7][8] and cases of plagiarism can constitute copyright infringement.
