[Center for Transnational Migration and Social Inclusion]

International Conference on Values of Care Work and Social Inclusion (10/29)

On October 29, 2019, the Center for Transnational Migration and Social Inclusion, which was officially launched in August of this year under the Institute of International Affairs at SNU GSIS, hosted an international conference on "Values of Care Work and Social Inclusion." Five other institutions joined efforts to lend generous support for this event, including Open Society Foundations, the largest private human rights funder in the world committed to building vibrant and inclusive societies.

The conference brought together researchers and representatives from civil society organizations to share knowledge on the present state of care provisioning in South Korea, learn about the respective challenges for paid and unpaid caregivers, and discuss necessary policy changes that are grounded in recognition of the value of care work. Stories from Thailand, Malaysia, and Colombia enriched the discussion and provided better perspectives to reflect on the case of South Korea. The participants affirmed the need for enhanced cooperation between the research community and civil society so that the actual voices of care workers can be better heard in the process of policymaking.

The October 29th conference was held as part of a four-day program comprising two expert workshops and two conferences, which aimed to examine the subject of care in the context of solidarity and social inclusion. The Center, under the directorship of Professor Ki-Soo Eun of SNU GSIS, has been conducting research with a broad network of scholars for the Care Work and the Economy Project (American University) to achieve a deeper understanding of the nature of care work through the use of innovative measures and methods, and to contribute to the development of tools for shaping relevant macroeconomic and social policies.

"Congratulations for making it through, 11th DCPP enrollment group.
Wish you all the best in your upcoming future."

People

Jiezel Nara Campus Asia Student

1. Brief introduction of yourself.

I am a double degree master's candidate from the Graduate School of Public Policy at the University of Tokyo and Graduate School of International Studies at Seoul National University as part of the Campus Asia Program. In my plethora of hobbies, reading and learning random facts (ex. It takes 17 muscles to smile and 43 muscles to frown) comes first. My academic concentration in East Asia with an emphasis on international cooperation, traditional and non-traditional security (e.g., energy and food), and peaceful reconciliation. I hope to work for institutions where my learnings can be effectively utilized.

2. Why did you apply for Campus Asia program?

I was initially on the regular track scheduled to finish graduate school in two years, concentrating on public management and international relations. However, even before entering graduate school, I have been interested in the affairs concerning Japan, South Korea, and China. As someone who believes that the best way to learn about something is to experience it, there was no better way to learn about the three countries than studying in them. Despite knowing that studying in three different countries in two and a half years can be backbreaking, my desire to pursue an even greater understanding of the CJK was stronger, so I applied.

3. How has the Campus Asia program helped you academically or personally for the future?

It has broadened my understanding of East Asia and other major actors in the region for one, and I firmly believe that it has allowed me to take a more objective position on issues facing the three countries. I am answering this interview as someone who has studied in all three universities, and my experience has taught me that each school has its specialization. One focuses on theories; another teaches a deep understanding of international affairs, while the other offers case and practice-centered learning. I always attempt to combine all three when approaching an issue that comes up in class or discussions in general. On a personal level, Campus Asia program, not only aspires to educate leaders of tomorrow but also strives to ensure that these students cultivate life-long relations that will improve the relationships of the three countries. In this regard, I am confident that the program has helped me establish connections that will last.

4. Do you have any advice or tips for the students who are interested in applying to Campus Asia?

The workload is demanding, and studying in another country away from people you know can be difficult; therefore, dedication and utmost interest in East Asia is a must. Living in another country can be hard, but that also strengthen the bonds you have with other Campus Asia students who are also facing similar experiences as you. Open-mindedness and the capacity to understand that others will have different points of view on something is necessary as contentious themes may also be tackled in classes. Without a shadow of a doubt, the program will provide you encounters that only studying in CJK can, and foster relationships that will last a lifetime.

5. What are your future plans?

After finishing the program, I intend to work for international organizations involved in energy, security, or cooperation. My thesis focuses on East Asian countries converging interests in Asia and Africa and its implication to their relationships. I hope to be able to continuously broaden and deepen my knowledge of relevant issues, even after finishing my education. The world is only getting smaller, with countries' interests expanding and merging. I believe that my proposed topic applies to other actors and regions, as well.

Deborah Kim President of Student Council

1. Brief introduction of yourself.

Hello, my name is Deborah Kim and I am currently a MA candidate studying International Cooperation. I was born and raised in Los Angeles, California and attended a small, but quaint Jesuit university in Baltimore, Maryland. I studied Philosophy for four years and thought that the life ahead of me was very far from both studying international cooperation and living in Seoul, but here I am, happily and proudly serving as the President of our SNU GSIS Student Council as a second semester student studying international cooperation.

2. Why were you interested in becoming a student council member?

Honestly, I was not interested in becoming a student council member. I didn't even know or think there would be a student council in graduate school, and even after I knew, I really didn't think it was the job for me. I had and still have an unbridled passion for education and only had my mind set on academics, research, and anything else that would aid in pursuing my academic career. I had my mind so stubbornly set on one thing, that I completely ignored how hard it would be to adjust to living and studying in Seoul. Little did I know, that the student council members of Spring 19 and especially, the previous President Buemsoo Kim, would play the most active part in helping me feel comfortable in order for me to do what I wanted to do here. I joined the team because I wanted to be a part of giving back to the community that welcomed me with open arms.

3. How is life as a student council member?

Life as a Student Council member definitely has its ups and downs. It is simultaneously exhausting and exhilarating, but absolutely worth every second of it. Of course nothing was ever a breeze. I definitely never got to be just Debbie. I felt like I always had a million things to do all while constantly checking my SC group chat to plan and check up on our upcoming events. Planning was dreary and difficult, executing felt impossible, but that feeling I got after looking at all those happy faces walking out of our event was what motivated me to push on and look forward to the next one.

4. What was the hardest part of being the student council president?

Before I started this job, I thought every part would be the hardest part of being in charge of such an organization. I don't think any part was the hard(est) part because not only did I have the support of our actively engaged first semester students, the professors, the guidance of Buemsoo, and the rest of our community, but most importantly, I had my SC members by my side every step of the way.

5. Do you have any advice or tips for the next student council members?

To be honest, if my answer to the question above was different, I think I would have much more to say regarding advice or tips for the incoming student council members and it would probably exceed the word limit of this page... I guess if there is one thing that I could pass on is – just be yourselves. All the newly elected members were chosen for a reason and that is because the community thought that they would fit the role. As long as they are true to themselves and the factors that originally motivated them, I believe that they will have an equally successful semester, and hopefully more.

6. What are your future plans?

There is nothing in this world that I love more than cats and being in school. I know I still have a long way to go, but I hope to go back home to the States and pursue a PhD. The professors that have mentored me here and the knowledge that I've gained from in and out of the classroom experience have furthered my passion to continue my academic endeavors.

7. To our SNU GSIS students!

To our GSIS students, I just wanted to say thank you. Thank you for your relentless support throughout the entire semester from start to finish. I was honestly worried that it was all too good to be true. I genuinely thought that the support would slow down and maybe even die down at a certain point, but the support continuously gained traction throughout the semester. Being an SC member is truly a thankless job, but you are the reason why there is an SC every semester and you are the reason why it is all so worth it.

Zablon Okenge DCPP

1. Brief introduction of yourself

I am a Kenyan citizen, born in the western part and raised in the capital of Nairobi. I hold an undergraduate degree in Economics from Kenyatta University and am here to pursue a master's degree in International studies. Before coming to Seoul, I have been working with the Government of Kenya as an Economist. I am a highly motivated person, self-organized and with great sense of responsibility. I grew up in a poor country, and the mere thought of a poor country drives my motivation to gain knowledge and skills that I can use to make meaningful contribution that will positively transform the society and improve people's quality of life.

2. How is life in Korea?

Korea is a great country, with wonderful people, intelligent, highly committed and with unmatched love for the Country. I have learnt so much through my interaction with different people who continually shape my thinking and ideas. It's a different culture in the way people live, their beliefs, behaviors, interactions and ooh my, the sweet food in the cafeterias and streets. I have grown from not knowing kimchi, to loving it. Life has been an absolute joy that has taught me a great lesson of acknowledging and respecting cultural diversity.

3. Why did you apply for DCPP?

The DCPP Program provided an opportunity for career and academic excellence and nowhere could that had been better achieved than at the prestigious Seoul National University. The Professors at the University are some of the best in their areas and an opportunity to interact with them on a daily basis, getting the knowledge and exchanging ideas is a lifetime reward. I will recommend anybody and everybody in this field to join this program.

4. How has the DCPP program helped you academically or professionally for the future?

The DCPP Program does not just focus on academic excellence, but on growth of a whole person with practical lessons emphasizing career growth. Besides the Program, I pay great tribute to the DCPP staff who works so diligent to ensure smooth running of Programs. The staff are rarely mentioned but they are the engine that drives the whole Program. The DCPP Directorate designed a wonderful program where academics is infused with a lot of practical training through exchange programs with different government organizations, seminars with global practitioners, field visits to various companies and emphasis on out of class learning. Besides the academics, I have learnt valuable lessons that will greatly improve performance of my duties in the public service and shape my thinking.

5. Do you have any advice or tips for the students who are interested in applying to DCPP?

Three pieces of advice to DCPP current and potential students. First, some of my best moments in Korea, I have enjoyed them out of class, out of normal course schedule and deep into co-curricular activities. Don't wait for opportunities to participate in events come to you, the moment you learn about them, go and grab them. The intrinsic value they present and the atmosphere they create can't be found in any lecture hall or book. Second, the system at GSIS is competitive, meant to get the best out of you, so prepare to work hard. Sometimes, the class schedules and assignments will be so demanding as to occupy most of your time, whatever the case, create time for yourself. Lastly, who said all the world knowledge is in the books? Life is for the living, relax, have fun and enjoy life with people and most importantly, learn from people.

6. What was your favorite memory of SNU GSIS?

I have had wonderful memories right from lecture halls interacting with students and Professors and also wonderful experiences while on study trips, at GKED, Sejong government complex, Hyundai factory and Samsung innovation museum and the wonderful Saemangeum Deep-Sea Reclamation Project. But what stands out was my participation in the Korea Africa Foundation (KAF) 2nd Model African Union Program. Through this Program, Korea students become delegates of various African countries at a simulated African Union Assembly discussing various topical issues. I was selected to be a mentor to students acting as Kenya delegates. It was such a great honor when the Kenyan delegates whom I mentored emerged overall victorious from delegates of eighteen countries that were represented and they received the Foreign Ministers Award to visit African Union headquarters in Ethiopia.

7. What are your future plans?

Severally I have challenged myself to pursue academic excellence and the atmosphere at GSIS has fueled that challenge. It has now become a prime goal to climb the academic ladder and contribute to the existing body of knowledge. Second and most important, I will utilize the knowledge and experience gained in solving societal challenges in the field of policy formulation, leadership and be a champion of good governance.

Needless to say, I have become the undisputed ambassador of Korea to my community and all those I will come across who have limited knowledge of Korea. Korea presents a classic example that developing countries can emulate, learn from and develop their own economies. It's the living proof that 'development is determination of citizens and their leaders'.

2019 Fall MT

MT was Student Council's first main event of the semester. The Fall MT was extremely enjoyable not only for our new students, but also for the Student Council members. It was a great opportunity for our new and current community members to come together to meet, engage, and interact with one another all day and night. The Student Council members hosted diverse team game stations, prepared a traditional Korean bbq meal, and made sure the event was fun, as much as it was safe. The MT was a success and the perfect way to start our Fall semester.

Inter-GSIS Events

This semester, the External Vice President of the Student Council did an outstanding job in fostering a community between SNU GSIS and other GSIS in Seoul. There were networking opportunities which were planned by all various GSIS members of Seoul to bring members from each community together. We, SNU GSIS, kicked off the academic semester by hosting the first Inter-GSIS event which including hiking up Gwanak Mountain and mingling over food and the traditional Korean rice-wine after.

Major Nights

At the beginning and end of the semester, the Major representatives coordinated Major Nights. These special nights presented the students from each majors a time to come together and mingle with other peers, as well as, the professors within those majors. All eight major nights, this semester, were an absolute blowout providing a wonderful opportunity for students to meet and interact casually with professors outside the classroom setting, strengthening the bond within the majors.

Thesis Proposal Workshop

This Fall, the Student Council had the honor of being approached by Professor Mobrand to prepare and launch a Thesis Proposal Workshop. He covered general tips for all four majors, especially on what constitutes as 'new' in academics, what it means to contribute to various academic fields, and how to collect required data along with strategies to do so.

Thesis Workshop

With the generous financial support from the Dean, the Fall Student Council was able to host four Thesis Workshops, one for each major. Each workshop, lasting around an hour, was led by a professor from each major. Due to the personalized theme of each workshops, the professors able to delve into major-specific research strategies and methodologies, writing techniques, and tips for strong research designs. After the workshop, there were active and meaningful Q&A sessions.

Alumni Night

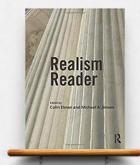

Student Council hosted an Alumni Night for current students to meet with graduates of GSIS. This time, given the demand that was heard from our peers, the Alumni Night was centered around the sectors of international organization and research. Alumnae with backgrounds working at the UN and the Korea International Trade Association gave profound presentations on their lives at GSIS and after GSIS at these organizations. Through this networking opportunity, students were able to take a peak at their possible futures and ask insightful questions.

Wine and Cheese

To wrap-up and give back to the GSIS community for a successful fall semester, the Student Council hosted a Wine and Cheese Night as a final curtain call. At Wine and Cheese, various members of GSIS came together to share laughter and to release some stress before final exams, all while relaxing with a glass of wine, fine cheese, and other assortments.. During this time, the Fall Student Council members passed on the torch to the incoming Spring 2020 members.
