COURSE DESCRIPTION
- Examine the political and economic history of North Korea from 1948 to present
- Explore the multifaceted sources of the evolution of the North Korean political and economic systems with a view to understanding the intersection between the past, present, and future of North Korea and the region at large
- Review the confluence and clash of visions, interests, and ideas advanced by different political institutions in North Korea that have shaped the past and present course of its political and economic developments
- Analyze the historical roots of major contemporary political and economic issues associated with North Korea, such as hereditary succession, post-totalitarian politics, economic reform and prospects for opening, nuclear diplomacy, inter-Korean relations, and economic and social ramifications of Pyongyang's dependence on China, and the polarization between the collapsist and engagement schools
