Sustainable Development of Health System

Fall 2022

Juhwan Oh, MD, MPH, PhD

Seoul National University School of International Studies
Seoul National University College of Medicine
Seoul National University Hospital

Overall aim

Through these lecture series, the students are supposed to learn how to improve people's health through optimal health system development. The students will begin to think via global, national, international, local perspectives with policy and program perspectives as well as international cooperation. Current shapes and historical trajectories will be tackled. The students will get competency to develop health system improvement plan at the end of the course.

Mode of class

Seminar (mostly): The students will read the required reading materials (listed below per each week) in advance. 1) Q&A, 2) Discussion, 3) Debate will be done sequentially in each class. Sometimes lectures will be done to introduce core basic concept for some topic and to fill the gap of the reading materials.

Grading

[15%] Attendance (attend or not will be only counted: merely 1% will be lost per one absence without legitimization before or after absence)

[25%] Mid-term report (My favorite country's health system, performance, and major weakness to improve: 4-6 pages) Select one of your favorite countries (by 9:59pm on 30 Sep); Investigate the selected country (by 9:59pm on Nov 25); and In-class presentation from 13th week to 15th week

[50%] Amend and improve the weakness of the health system of the selected country towards (making your own) better development plan with safer and healthier living and working environment for the people in your favorite country (Final report)

The class begins at 2pm and ends at 5pm: with an intermission or two

Overseas or domestic special guest lecturers will give lecture at 4-5 pm as the last class activity of the class in some weeks between 5-12th weeks

Country case presentation will be at 4-5pm every week from 13th week to 15th week as the last class activity of each class by sequential participation of all students
